Calumet Quarter: The Power of Place (Spring 2024)

Through a concatenation of cultural practices, social relations and economic processes—all within the indomitable crucible of nature—people don't just create places, they produce vastly different sorts of places: urban and rural, towns, cities, neighborhoods and villages and their myriad interconnections. This rich geographical tapestry is reason enough for the juggernaut of global tourism. At the University of Chicago, we study places because of their intrinsic interest but perhaps more importantly, we study places to learn what it means to be human. During Spring 2024, students can embark on this intellectual journey in an immersive learning experience called the "Calumet Quarter." Through three linked courses, students will take a deep dive into the very specific historical geography of the Calumet region south and east of Chicago and, along the way, gain insights and analytical skills relevant to understanding other places: we develop an approach to place and learn its power. The Calumet Quarter is a collaboration between Chicago Studies, the Committee on Environment, Geography and Urbanization, and the Field Museum of Natural History.

Planning for Land and Life in the Calumet (Mark Bouman, Field Museum) - CEGU/CHST/PBPL 26366; HIST 27313

Objects, Place and Power (Jessica Landau) - CEGU/CHST/ARTH/PBPL 26267; HIST 27314

Spring 2025: Latin(e/x) Chicago – NEW Chicago Studies CIV/ARTS Core (early decision applications open on Monday, April 1, 2024)

Join us for Chicago Studies' inaugural CIV + ARTS Core sequence in Spring 2025, which will explore Chicago - a global city with an outsized influence on the history, material economy, and cultural/intellectual movements not only of the United States but of the world - using some of the same methods pursued by UChicago's Study Abroad-based CIV sequences to fulfill those Core requirements right here at home.

"Latin America in/at Chicago” – Diana Schwartz Francisco (History, LASC)
"Immigrant Chicago” – René Flores (Sociology)
"Latinx Arts in Chicago” – Sergio Delgado Moya (Romance Languages/Literatures)

The three courses that comprise this sequence will provide students with deep knowledge of how Latin(e/x) Americans have transformed and experienced Chicago. The two civilization courses in the sequence marshal distinct social scientific approaches to examine Latin(e/x) American Chicago. "Latin America in/at Chicago” examines hemispheric social, political, and intellectual connections in the city over the long twentieth century. "Immigrant Chicago” homes in on the specific experiences of Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, and Venezuelans to convey the diversity of Latin(e/x) Chicago and historicize the contemporary reality of immigration from the region. The final course in the bundle, "Latinx Arts in Chicago,” is an arts core that examines artistic production as creative responses to the lived realities of Latinx populations in the city.
